

Sean
Canada March 2009

The CN tower is a communications and observation tower standing 553.33 metres tall. For 31 years it was the tallest freestanding structure in the world until it was surpassed by the height of the Burj Dubai whilst still under construction in 2007. Sean having witnessed the Burj himself last month, felt that being a small bear, anything taller than 15cm was impressive!

Toronto

Niagara Falls

Sean
Canada March 2009

Mikey the Moose kindly looked after me!

Sean didn't know that wine was produced in such quantities in Canada in the Niagara region.

Who's going to know if I try some!

Glenforest School
Millais School's partner school
in Canada

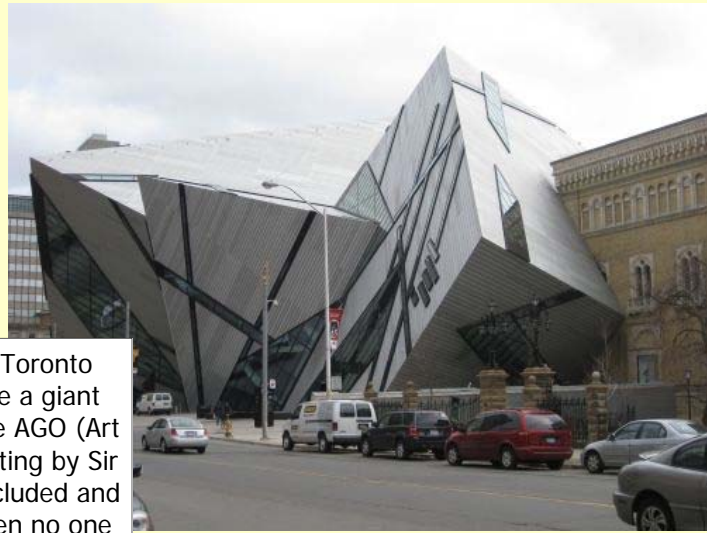

The nice headteacher is keeping me warm!

Sean
Canada March 2009

Here I am, in case you couldn't see me! I am inside one of Henry Moore's sculptures. The temperature was minus 15 degrees Celsius on this particular day so I couldn't sit there for long!

The Royal Ontario Museum (ROM) in Toronto (right) has been renovated to look like a giant crystal. In another building called the AGO (Art Gallery of Ontario) Sean found a painting by Sir John Everett Millais called Peace Concluded and managed to get a quick photo in, when no one was looking.

This is an aboriginal offering. In one of the parks near Niagara falls. The peoples of Canada are very multi-racial—many are newcomers from other countries. Aboriginal peoples (once called Indians) retain their own culture and customs.

