

Sean queuing up for food again, but is happy to wait as he admires the scantily clad lady!

A spot of shopping to stock up on French.....

...food of course.

Understandably, Sean is concerned that the width of the car appears wider than the door it has to go through?

While under German occupation, the city was devastated in 1944 during the Battle of Normandy in World War II; 5,000 people were killed and 12,000 homes destroyed, mainly by British air attacks. After the war, the centre was rebuilt in the modernist style by Auguste Perret. Le Havre was honoured with the Legion of Honour award on 18 July 1949.
